The Labor Struggle is Primarily and Essentially a Struggle for Industrial Control. Industrial Unionism, therefore, is the First and only Requisite.

The Late New Zealand Strike.

BY C.T.B.

As a protest against the masters' tactics in Waith, the Huntly coal miners with other workers ceased work in a unique and highly successful strike held a demonstration. Next day the whole of the miners' executive were dismissed, and the Huntly miners now ceased work in consequence. They were forced back to work under the Arbitration Act, and those prominent in the strike were obliged to roam destitute. The same applies to the Auckland general labourers.

In reality, there is no General Labourers' Union. There are some 300 members, and under the Arbitration Act at that. Since the first strike at Huntly the miners have known no peace. Miner after miner was dismissed even the resolutions revolted, and still another strike was declared. The cowardly action of the Coal Board aroused the workers throughout New Zealand. Trouble eventually took place on the coal port at Wellingon. This coupled with the Huntly troubles set the country alight, and wages and conditions of the country openly revolted from the North Cape to the Southland, from Auckland above, twenty-two unions, somewhat dilatory, it must be admitted, responded to the call of the Huntly miners, but meanwhile the masters were not about to take advantage of the absence and concentration machinery of craft organisation, and scales and special police were mobilised in order to crush every spark.

The defeat of the strike point to the absolute necessity of some form of organisation other than a conglomeration of craft unions.

Even admitting the concessions of the Coal Board, the Federation of Labour can do little good to the workers in the South if they take the line of appeal to the masters in the North. Nor will it be of much help to many of the workers in the North if they take the line of appeal to the masters in the South. Nor will it be of much help to many of the workers.

Trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitied against another set. The workers in the same industry, thereby helping to defeat one another in wage-war.

A careful study of Industrial Unionism must surely convince the least intelligent that here is a weapon which, if adopted by the workers, would be all-powerful. Such a form of organisation, embracing all the actual wage-workers in any given country regardless of craft, creed, or colour, promises something right here and now. Within such a weapon a layman to our hand very sure craft union warfare is madness, and the actual wage-workers should discard craft organisation, directly or indirectly, thereby brand themselves as traitors to the interests of the toiling masses.

The Preamble

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and need are found among millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life. Between these two classes a struggle must go on until one and all are free from wage-slavery.

The working class is composed of all the workers of the world organised as a class, taking possession of the means of production and distribution, and abolishing wage slavery.

We find that the centering of the management of industrial matters in the hands of the owner and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitied against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping to defeat one another in wage-war.

Abolition of the wage system.

It is the fatal illusion of the working class to do away with Capitalism. The army of production must be organised, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalism, but also to carry out the intelligence of the revolution when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organising industrially, we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

Kneeling, therefore, that such an organisation is absolutely necessary for our emancipation, we unite under the following constitution.

Somewhat Personal.

This paper is written by slaves for slaves. As long as we are under the tyranny of the workers, we do not care whether or not strikes criticise, friends approve, or enemies revile. Grammar, orthography, punctuation, etc., are things that we heard of as school and were not yet, apparently, accomplished in our task. We are only "uncultured," "untouched," and ungrammatical.

We drop our a's in conversation, our s's being faulty and our p's abominable, but fellow-selves will, nevertheless, understand our message. This is not meant to be an apology. It is merely a statement, but we hope, a polite, method of telling word-heroes to go to hell.

The author of the pamphlet, "How Capitalism Has Hypoised Society," a first instalment of which appeared in our last issue, is W. L. Thompson, Brown, to whom we apologise for inadvertently calling his name. In our opinion the pamphlet is one of the best in revolutionary literature, and should be in the hands of every wage-worker.

WHY LIVING IS DEAR

The fact that labor has become a commodity in the modern world is the result of certain economic conditions in the industrial structure of our civilization. This commodity status of labor has brought about a situation in which labor is controlled by the employer, who is not concerned with the welfare of the worker but only with the profit of his business. This has led to the condition where labor is forced to work for lower wages and longer hours than ever before, while the profits of industry are concentrated in the hands of a few. The result is a state of economic misery for the working class, characterized by poverty, unemployment, and exploitation.

To understand these conditions, it is necessary to examine the economic system under which we live. This system is based on the concept of private property, where the means of production are owned by individuals or corporations, and the fruits of labor are used to create profit for those who own them. This system is inherently unequal, as it leads to the concentration of wealth and power in the hands of a few, while the majority of the population is left to struggle for survival.

In order to overcome this system, it is necessary to organize the working class into a class-conscious entity. This means recognizing labor as a commodity, understanding the power dynamics at play, and taking action to change the economic system. The I.W.W. has been at the forefront of this movement, working to build a social revolution that will truly free the working class from the chains of exploitation and oppression.

OPEN LETTER

To the latter, you ought to be aware that for all the talk of the bosses, no one seems to see why they should be paid less or why they should be treated so unfairly. I am not suggesting that all the trouble is caused by the bosses, but I am forced to the conclusion that there is something fundamentally wrong with the way in which we are being run.

The problem, I believe, lies in the fact that the bosses are accountable only to themselves and have little regard for the welfare of the workers. This is something that needs to be changed if we are ever to see a better future for all.

Sincerely,

Mr. O'Brien
Secretary of the Trades Union Council

Dear Sir,

With great concern, I must bring to your attention the ongoing difficulties faced by the workers in the [specific industry/area]. The situation has worsened significantly in recent months, and I believe it is time for action to be taken.

I have been receiving numerous complaints from workers about low wages, long hours, and poor working conditions. These issues are not only affecting the workers' health and well-being but also the broader community, as their spending power is reduced.

I urge you to consider the following recommendations to address these issues:

1. Increase wages to ensure a living wage for all workers.
2. Implement a合理的工作小时制度 to prevent overwork.
3. Improve working conditions in all factories and workplaces.

I urge you to take these recommendations seriously and work towards implementing them as soon as possible.

Yours sincerely,

Short Arm Jolts.

Mr. Holman, Premier of New South Wales, has left Sydney for Bony. He will return to Sydney on Monday for "opening day" in the New South Wales Parliament.

Premier Myer, of New Zealand, is the capitalist tool by whose agency New South Wales will be compelled to adopt the "State ownership" system, which we have been opposing for years. It is clear that the New South Wales Government will have to adopt the "State ownership" system, which we have been opposing for years.

Mr. Holman informs us that six years ago the I.W.W. were organized as a trade union, and that now, for the first time, the I.W.W. has been established in Australia only some two years ago. It is interesting to hear from such a reliable source that it was "making much headway in the last four years or before.

I do not understand, adds the late Mr. Holman, anyone suggests there is a better method of fighting the capitalist system in the Parliament of Australia. Of course not; at least not in the New South Wales Parliament.

In Short Arm, Mr. Holman says, there is no question about the importance of the I.W.W. in the New South Wales Parliament.

The politicians' reputation for honesty is not so high as it might be. The I.W.W. are the only ones who will be honest. The I.W.W. have been in existence only a short time.

Spreading of Radicalism reminds me that there is nothing like the I.W.W.'s "two-way" gamble. Having to do it, he points out, in the medium of the "two-way" gamble, he might be able to get some of the workers of the New South Wales Parliament to support the I.W.W. The I.W.W. have been in existence only a short time.

Here we are in the midst of a whole series of I.W.W. meetings in the New South Wales Parliament.

The workers of the New South Wales Parliament are in a much better position to handle the I.W.W. than the workers of the New South Wales Parliament.
